The technological gap is increasingly evident in Europe. After the coronavirus crisis it has become more evident. While rural areas or the aging population were already priority areas of attention, these months have highlighted the failures of the system, leaving aside many groups in vulnerable situations. Telemedicine is based on the concept of improving and facilitating personalized patient care, as well as improving the patient's quality of life. But... Is it showing to respond to the current challenge? In this workshop experts will explain the progress and efforts of different European and national projects to answer to these challenges. In addition, the need to promote exchange in collaborative networks will be emphasized.
